Responsibility as Caretakers

There is a reason behind every behavior, nothing happens in a vacuum. It is our responsibility to not to allow our behavior to become the reason behind the patient’s disorderly behavior.

When a patient is present in the hospital, he/she is experiencing a traumatic event. The association with being in the hospital is enough to alter the mental state of the most well-balanced person. Many of the negative issues surrounding the management of a patient’s behavior are caused by us, the staff.

Jackson South Psychiatric Unit Practice Council